CHURCH PASTORS AND PILLARS

Review of the Local Religious Events of the Past Week.

GATHERINGS OF GOD'S ELECT.

Growth of the First United Presbyterian Church—Presbyteries Past and Future—Other News and Notes.

Rev. J. M. French has just closed his first year as pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, and his administration has proved a pleasant and profitable one to the church. The addition of members during the year has been 50 per cent, making a net increase of 20 per cent. One year ago the Sabbath school had 102 scholars; now it has 191 scholars with fifteen teachers and five officers. The woman's missionary society has doubled its number of members. There is a flourishing mission band with two departments the junior and the senior. The mission band has raised $66 during the five months since its organization. The young people's society is in good condition. The congregation has paid its quota to the board and to all other funds of the church. It has paid the pastor's salary in full and still has a little money in the treasury. The total amount raised during the year is $2,700, making an average of $30 per member, ninety being the membership the first of the year. These reports were made at its late annual meeting. During the past ten years this congregation has done excellent work in the city. In 1885 it organized the Cass street mission Sabbath school, in which excellent work has been done ever since, and also another mission Sabbath school, which, with members from the First church, soon became the Park avenue congregation. In 1887 the Central church was organized of members almost entirely from the First church. These seven years show a greater rate of increase of cause in Omaha than any other in its history. Notwithstanding great numbers within a year withdrew to form other churches, yet the First church did not seem to be weakened in the least, but immediately for the first time announced itself as independent of the board of home missions and contained its successful work. The congregation was never before so well organized nor harmonious as at present. The congregation expects to move to the northern part of the city during the summer. It will then have an excellent field for missionary work, and a building more convenient to a large number of the families and in a rapidly growing part of the city.

Omaha Presbytery.
On next Tuesday the churches of the Omaha presbytery of the Presbyterian church will meet in convention at Papillion. There are forty-two churches in the organization. The meeting promises to be an important one as the question of the revision of the confession of faith will be discussed at length. Every minister present will be permitted to present his views on the subject.

Rev. J. M. French of the Castellar Street Presbyterian church, in this city, will act as moderator and President Daniel R. Kerr, D.D. of Bellevue, secretary.

The opening session will be on Tuesday evening at which time the moderator, Rev. J. M. French, will deliver an address. On Wednesday morning the business session will commence, and will probably continue until Thursday afternoon.

Presbyterian Missionary Society.
The annual meeting of the Woman's home and foreign missionary society of the presbytery of Omaha will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Seventeenth and Dodge streets, on April 21, at 1:30 p. m. Evening meetings will be held at 7:45 p. m. Rev. W. J. Harshbarger, an address will be delivered at the latter by Dr. Callispe, secretary of the board of foreign missions.

The program for Monday, 1:30 p. m., is as follows: Devotional exercises, Mrs. Laird, words of welcome, reply, president's address, secretary's report, reports of vice presidents, financial report, address, Missionary Literature, Mrs. C. C. C. address, "What is Miss Parnell Preedy; business question, roll call, delegate's report, election of officers; discussion of hand work, Mrs. Wilson.

Enlarged Central West.
The Central West, well named, a breezy paper for busy Presbyterians, has been again enlarged and improved, having now seven instead of six columns as formerly on each page. It has been lengthened in proportion. It is now the size of the Interior and other high priced Presbyterian papers in the east. Among the new features is the Doctor department, an entire page being devoted to the church news of that city. Another is the column entitled "Things of Today," being a condensation of the latest secular news up to the hour of going to press.

Rev. Mr. Jones Called.
Rev. W. Jones, the Methodist minister who has been filling the pulpit of the South-west Presbyterian church for several months, has been offered the pastorate of that society at a salary of $2,000 per annum.

Mr. Jones is an able and conscientious man. He has been a Methodist minister for a number of years, but a study of theology and church methods has caused him to become a Presbyterian. He has accordingly given up the pastorate of a flourishing Methodist church in Iowa to come to Omaha.

THE OPEN DOOR.
And so they'd close the "Open Door" Against the weary, wayward feet; The beacon light must shine no more To guide them to its safe retreat!

O, loving Christ, can this be so,
When they who'd close the "Open Door" Against the weary, wayward feet; The beacon light must shine no more To guide them to its safe retreat!

Where church spires gleam in the skies,
And golden windows point above,
The sun-like wanderer fainting dies—
The want of bread and human love!

Ones for them didst touch the heart,
That they who've felt sin's blighting smart—
Thou seest their sisters' pains.

For in their night they shall come,
When all earth's millions shall be there,
For judgment, based on deeds that's done
And not on words, or rite, or prayer!

Thou Christ with piercing glance divine
Wilt see the heart of him who'll shine
For in each breast a light doth shine
That came there through the "Open Door!"

When lo! with accents pure and mild
He'll speak those thrilling words to thee—
"Since thou hast had my wounded child,
Thou surely didst let it into me!"

"To thee shall open the gates of peace,
For thou the sign of bliss wilt shine;
Thy words shall find sweet rest
In heaven's awakening love divine."

OBITUARY.
MRS. MARY PORTER PARSONS ROGERS.
The recent death of Mrs. Mary Porter Parsons Rogers, whose life spanned nearly a century, is an event which invites a fuller notice than it has yet received. I knew her quite intimately during her twenty years residence in Omaha, and her character was one of the most attractive and lovable that I have ever met. No account of her life would be complete, however, which did not include the character and career of her husband, the late N. P. Rogers, who died some years ago at the age of fifty-two.

Mr. Rogers was a man of genius, with a keen will and a warm heart, possessing both the most attractive and lovable that I have ever met.
